Relatives Willed T. E. Byrnes Estate

The estate of Thomas E. Byrnes, 77, former San Mateo postmaster who died July 19, was "in excess of $10,000," according to a petition for probate of will filed in the county clerk's office Monday.

However, that the estate was considerably more was indicated by bequests. Bequests of $10,000 each were made to Ruth G. Byrnes, niece residing in San Francisco, and Ruth K. Gugel, 910 Palm avenue, San Mateo, a "close friend." Miss Gugel also receives a diamond ring.

Mrs. Ethel Cahalan, 231 Villa Terrance, San Mateo, described as another friend, was willed $500. Her daughters, Barbara Cahalan and Mrs. Helen Cahalan Haberlin, the latter at 2325 Hale drive, San Mateo, and her son, Harry Cahalan, receive $250 apiece.

The remainder of the estate, for which no estimate is to be available until after inventory is taken, will be divided between Annie M. Byrnes, sister of Mr. Byrnes, and named as executor, and Mrs. Mary M. Mahoney, another sister. Both reside at 808 Laurel avenue, San Mateo.

Autoist Loses Funds On Skyline 'Ride'

William Cannon, 24, Los Angeles visitor to San Francisco, was without his coat and at least $8.50 poorer today, following a jovial tour Saturday night of San Francisco in the company of two men whose names he did not know.

He told the highway patrol that the pair asked him on a ride, then took him into the hills near Colma and held him up, taking the money and his coat.

The men were about 24 and 28 years of age, he said. San Francisco police are investigating.

MILLS FIELD, July 29—Ten additional Douglas DC3 mainliners to be used for coast-to-coast travel from Mills Field have been approved for order by the directors of the United Air Lines, it was announced today by S. A. Stimpson, district traffic manager. The company will take delivery Monday of the last plane in its original order of 30 twin-engined Douglasses, including Skysleepers, Sky lounges and 20-passenger type planes.

ATTACK BRINGS 30 DAYS

Larry Asevedo, Dumbarton Oaks butcher charged with battery by his wife, Mrs. Lucille Asevedo, Monday was sentenced to 30 days in the county jail by Judge Edward I. McAuliffe. He pleaded guilty to striking his wife with their child's toy wheelbarrow.

New Hearst Writer Takes Home Here

George W. Lynn, who has been selected by the Hearst organization to conduct the editorial column, "The Editor Says," in the San Francisco Call-Bulletin, has taken a residence in Palomar Park, Redwood City.

Mrs. Lynn and daughter, Joan, arrived from Santa Barbara on Saturday.

For the last ten years Lynn has been editor of the Santa Barbara Daily News. This year he was awarded the annual silver cup of the California Newspaper Publishers' Association for the outstanding editorial printed in a member newspaper during 1936. He is a World War veteran and served in France with the air service.

William Faukner, Mississippi novelist, used to paint houses to eke out his income as a writer.

Farmers Subject To Some Phases Of Security Law

That some farmers are affected by social security legislation, even though they believe they are exempt, was indicated by the California State Chamber of Commerce in an announcement today.

Officials stated that because of previous publicity, many farmers are operating under the impression that all types of agricultural labor are exempted from the terms of this legislation and are accumulating unnecessary penalties. In order to eliminate this confused situation, the state chamber plans to conduct a campaign to familiarize those interested in agriculture with the terms of the acts, so that farmers may know which classifications are included and which are exempt.

Decisions rendered under the terms of Regulations 90 and 91 of the Bureau of Internal Revenue have stated that only work in connection with the actual planting, cultivation, and harvesting of crops which is done for the owner or tenant of a farm is exempt and that all supplemental trades such as bookkeeping, carpentry, box-making, machinery maintenance, and wine making come under the acts.

The state chamber pointed out that neither the Bureau of Internal Revenue, nor the State Unemployment Reserves Commission is authorized to issue general rules which can be followed, but must determine each case upon the basis of the facts presented.

NEW BORN BABY DIES

Death came two hours after he was born at 6:20 a.m. Sunday to the baby boy of Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Carinio, 506 Oak avenue, Redwood City, according to word received from a San Mateo hospital.

R. C. Unit Wins Publicity Race

Election of two state officers and a victory in the publicity contest were honors brought back Monday by Redwood City Lodge No. 1112, Loyal Order of Moose, following a four-day state-wide convention in Sacramento that closed Sunday.

R. H. Parker, dictator of the local lodge, was elected publicity chairman, and Frank Groce of Redwood City, re-elected state treasurer. The local unit took first place in Class B of the publicity contest, with 50 column inches of news more than their closest rival, Santa Rosa, last year's winners.

Harold Nuzum of Los Angeles was elected state president following a lively contest ending with withdrawal of Court Prowell of Long Beach. Nuzum succeeds Ralph Salisbury of Santa Rosa.

Other officers, all unopposed, were Secretary J. Weger, Oakland; Prelate Al Quinn, San Francisco; Sergeant-at-Arms Robert Jerome, Bakersfield, and as vice president of the bay district, George Pollock, Salinas.

Approximately 5000 attended the convention, opened Thursday with an address by Sacramento's mayor and other city officials.

Salinas defeated Burbank to determine the state degree staff champions. M. J. Walzberg of Redwood City was among the judges, who awarded the cup permanently to Salinas for its third straight victory.

O. W. Neikirk and Dictator Parker were given the fellowship degree, second highest Moose honors.

An invitation was extended by Redwood City for all Moose to attend the Harbor Opening Festival September 10-12.

Santa Barbara was selected as site for the 1938 convention.

New Optometry Offices Opened In Redwood City

Dr. R. Lee Otis has opened his new optometry establishment at 12 California street.

The new unit will be a branch of the San Francisco office which Dr. Otis established in 1923.

"I have lived in the vicinity of Redwood City for the past four years," Dr. Otis stated in discussing his new office, "and I am thoroughly convinced that this city can support another optometrist."

The local office will be in charge of Dr. Ancil J. Mello, optometrist graduate of the University of Southern California. Dr. Otis himself will be in attendance on Tuesdays and Fridays.

Besides carrying optometry supplies, the new firm will handle a line of novelty jewelry.

Trantow in Surprise Plea Asks Probation

Ernest Trantow, 21, Redwood City youth, in a surprise move Monday pleaded guilty to forging a $50 check of his employer, Edwin Sandberg, July 3, and asked for probation. Judge A. R. Cotton referred the case to the probation officer for a report August 9, when Trantow will appear for sentence. Atty. W. H. Morrissey of Redwood City represented the defendant. Trantow's trial had been set for next Monday.

Leslie Fenton and Ann Dvorak have three acres of orchids under cultivation.

2 Millions Aid VetHomesHere

San Mateo county has a total of 463 Veterans' homes, cost of which was $2,215,125 up through June, according to the Veterans' Welfare Board report made to Governor Merriam.

Only one farm is listed for this county.

Almost 17,000 California war veterans and their families are residing in farms or homes valued at $78,619,054, which were obtained through the board, John R. Quinn, chairman, stated.

The purchases are made under the Veterans' Farm and Home Purchase Act, administered by the board at the rate of approximately $1,000,000 a month, he said.

Approximately $74,000,000 of the $80,000,00 bonds authorized have been placed on the market by the state treasurer.

Loans are distributed throughout the state in accordance with the filing of applications by veteran beneficiaries. Maturity and interest of the bonds are paid through returns of veterans' monthly and annual installments which also care for administrative expenses of the board, making the bureau self-supporting, Quinn claimed.

TEACHER SUES SOCIALITE

A peninsula society girl and a Palo Alto high school teacher were on opposite sides of a $25,000 damage suit filed today, as Edna Kroner, the teacher, asked the sum from Ruth Howe of Palo Alto for injuries allegedly incurred when she was struck by Miss Howe's automobile May 20.

Best-Dressed Woman

BY HELEN WELSHIMER — COPYRIGHT, 1937, NEA SERVICE, INC.

CHAPTER I

OUTSIDE a storm was raging. Even in the velvet recesses of her dressing room at the most exclusive couturier's in New York, Judith Irving felt the tremendous rhythm, the daring, the grandeur of it. Now the slim white buildings that barricaded the horizon were slashed with rain, and the tip of the Empire State building caught lightning and flung it like a slim green banner of fire.

Green fire . . . Judith looked down at the dinner jacket she wore, a jacket whose vivid green was a bright light against the storm-black of the heavy crepe dress. There was a similarity . . .

From the striking cheval mirrors in the dressing room, she watched her striking, slender, black-haired selves walk back and forth. Tomorrow the newspapers would announce that she, Mrs. Philip Godfrey Irving, had paid $800 for that jacket, that she had purchased five other jackets as costly—one in silver, one in Coronation pink, one in royal gold, a blue that was slippery and a white that was dull and powdery. Best dressed woman in America! Best dressed woman in the world, some artists and stylists said.

Suddenly, with the swift, lithe grace that distinguished her, she seated herself before the mirrors, studied her effect. There was a light knock on the door. She turned casually. It would be only Annette, with the pale blue evening dress adorned with scarves of long flame crepe which she would wear to dinner and the theater tonight.

"Come in," she said quietly, no hint of disturbance in her voice.

It wasn't Annette. It was the woman about whom she had been thinking when she sat down to study herself before the mirrors.

"Darling, I'm stealing your husband for an hour or two," the newcomer said gaily but her eyes weren't laughing. "You don't mind, do you?"

Judith wanted to say: "Do I mind? I mind so much that I have to clench my hands to keep from telling you what I think of you! I mind so much that I can't see why Phil wants to be bored for one half second—" But she didn't. Instead, she answered easily and nonchalantly: "He told me. He said he was having tea with a beautiful woman who wanted help about investments, and I guessed you. Have a good time and rescue him from the cinnamon buns. He's the handsomest man I know but the waistline may creep out on him."

* * *

WHEN Mrs. Rogers had gone, and Judith was dressed in her brown wool ensemble whose jacket of hyacinth blue had butterflies done in warmer colors, she seated herself once more at her mirror. Intently she looked into her own cloudy gray eyes.

Phil—Phil . . . He was hers. That is, as much as one human being could belong to another. It had been that way for six years now. They didn't just love each other—they liked each other, which was even more important.

Phil . . . He wasn't handsome. Rugged was a better word. Tall, broad shouldered, slim waisted, with rough-edged blond hair and blue eyes that some seafaring relative had given him. He had worked his way through college where he had been an All-American football star. A wealthy grandfather, who had disinherited Phil's father, had taken an interest in him after that, helped him through law school and had left him his money. Now, at 34, Phil was not only rich, but a brilliant and successful young corporation lawyer.

Sitting before the mirror, with the storm beating against the windows, Judith relived a scene of the night before. The telephone had rung and she had answered the extension in her dressing room. Already there were voices on the line. Phil's and a woman's.

"Of course, darling. Same time and place," she heard Phil say.

"I plan all my day around that hour," the velvet voice came back.

* * *

VERY quietly she replaced the telephone and when she went into the living room where Phil was waiting in his immaculate dinner clothes she was as cool and composed as the silver metallic sheath that wrapped her slim body.

"You're gorgeous," he said. "A movie version of Joan of Arc done in excellent taste."

Now she smiled, but it did not reach her eyes. Phil knew it. She sensed it in the tightening of the muscles at his mouth. Suddenly he felt the need of explanation—and they never explained to each other. It wasn't necessary.

"Marta Rogers called. I'm helping her with some investments. I'm having tea with her tomorrow."

Maybe that really was the gist of it all. Maybe . . . then her natural common sense asserted itself. Any man got a romantic throwback in the applauding limelight of a pretty woman's smile—and Marta Rogers, with her blown-gold hair and blue-amethyst eyes, was as pretty as any debutante. Jealousy was a green cat that should be drowned in any rain barrel. Suddenly she became gay.

Phil was kind and devoted during the evening but she thought his spirit wondered sometimes and then his mind would hurry back to her. She smiled in the darkened playhouse—she could see it coming, tripping over itself to get back before it was missed.

* * *

NOW, in the dressing room, she stood up. Her car was waiting. She would stay at Anne's tea only a minute—it would be the usual gossip, somebody playing a cello and violin, not because anyone wanted music but because it was a softened soundboard for voices that were getting too shrill.

Best dressed woman . . . She laughed quietly as the limousine sped up Park Avenue.

Anne, whom she had known for years, was a large woman, familiar enough with Judith's moods to find and ignore the trouble in her eyes. "Come in, darling. I have a surprise. Bruce Knight is here."

"Did you plan it?" Judith forgot Phil for a second.

"No, Millicent Bayne brought him. She carries somebody's umbrella or something across the stage in his play."

"Anne, be a dear and don't tell him who I am—who I used to be, I mean."

But when she met the actor, tall and fair-haired, in perfect tweeds, his keen eyes scanned her face.

"Don't we know each other?" he asked. "I've seen you—"

"In the rotogravures," Millicent supplied. "Judy's America's best dressed woman and any actress would envy the publicity she gets."

"Mrs. Philip Godfrey Irving." He repeated the name slowly. "No, it wasn't the clothes I've seen. I think it was you."

"We will compare itineraries," Judy said laughingly, but suddenly she wasn't the poised woman of the world whose husband was taking an inconsequential woman to tea. She was Judith Bole, old man Bole's youngest, whose legs were too long and whose hair was fly-away stuff—Judy Bole who lived on a river boat anchored in the flats of Pittsburgh's rivers. She was 17, a high school junior.

Because she had worked happily in the chemistry laboratory with a boy named Bruce Knight they had become friends. Once the class had made an expedition to a mining district and he had taken her in his roadster. They had been late in returning because they had discovered a long way back. The girls, whose clothes were good and whose houses opened on streets, had spurned her because she had taken Bruce, a popular senior idol, from them that day. And she had vowed in a frightened, little-girl heart that some day she would do something to show them she mattered—write a book, be an actress. Of course she couldn't, though.

* * *

THIRTEEN years ago that had been—and here they were, important names both of them; a Broadway favorite and a woman who knew style.

"Yes, we'll repeat our travels and find a mutual crossroads," the man was saying. "How about lunch, tomorrow?"

She shook her head. Tomorrow she was going to suggest lunch to Phil. Suddenly, the fear of the night before came back. She was the frightened, shabby little Judy Bole, wanting somebody to be kind to her.

"Thursday?" the man was saying. "The Union Club—Ladies' room?"

"At one?" she asked simply.

"Telephone for you, darling," Anne interrupted. "In my sitting room." She lowered her voice as she walked away with Judith. "Judy, that Rogers' woman who divorced her husband in Paris last year and came from goodness knows where before New York took 'em up, is casting purple eyes at Phil and he's too sweet to know it. You'd better stop this."

Judith laughed but her hand was shaking when she picked up the receiver.

"Judy dear?" The voice that could make her heart turn over like a top came cheerfully into the room. "I'm being detained—but I'll join the party later. We're dining with the Colbys, aren't we? Will you make my apologies?"

$30,000 BOWLING PARLOR

James Dodge Plans Development, Utilizing Theatre Building Vacant 10 Years

Details of a development which will see one of Redwood City's long vacant buildings transformed into the largest and most modern bowling parlor between San Francisco and San Jose were revealed today by James C. Dodge as he completed negotiations for the project, which will represent an outlay of approximately $30,000.

"Dodge's Redwood Bowl," as the new establishment will be called, will be located in the Old Sequoia Theatre building on Broadway, between the Bank of America and the Pacific Gas and Electric Company office. Vacant for the past 10 years, since opening of the Fox Sequoia Theatre, the concrete building will be completely modernized and rebuilt to accommodate the luxurious bowling alley planned by Dodge.

Desiring to create an establishment which will attract women as well as men to participate in the game which is fast growing in popularity, Dodge has made elaborate plans for the new parlor, which will also encompass a lunch room and a smoke shop.

A complete new level floor will replace the present sloping one; a new, modernistic tile front across the entire 50 feet of the building will render the outside of the structure as pleasing in appearance as the adjacent buildings; the old marquee will be removed; half of the old balcony will be converted into a mezzanine with a row of opera seats for spectators; two additional rows of opera seats and four players' benches will be installed downstairs on elevations so that a clear view of the play may be had; the old stage will be replaced partly with the alleys and partly with a "pin boys'" room; a ladies' lounge and a men's locker room and rest room will be built in one section of the mezzanine; new lighting fixtures will be installed, and the entire place redecorated.

Contracts for the construction work are expected to be let within the next few days.

A 10-year lease has been secured on the building from the West Coast Theatre Company, Dodge revealed.

EIGHT ALLEYS ORDERED

Eight bowling alleys will be installed, contracts having already been let to the Brunswick, Balke, Collender Company of Chicago to supply them. The firm will send a man from Chicago to supervise installation of the alleys, which in themselves will cost a total of $16,000. All the equipment will be new, and of the most modern type, and equipment to keep it in shape, including a sanding machine and lathe, will be installed. At least two men besides himself and a number of "pin boys" will be employed when the bowling parlor is opened, Dodge said.

Dodge revealed that he had gone so far as to make tentative arrangements for an opening night exhibition between ladies' teams of San Francisco and San Jose. He plans to open the parlor the early part of October. Making a special appeal to women and children, Dodge disclosed that free instruction in bowling will be offered for women in the forenoons. Plans are also being made for tourneys, such as that conducted by Redwood City fraternal and service organizations at the Palo Alto bowling alley last winter.

COATS BUYS CIGAR STORE

Dodge's present cigar store at 2366 Broadway has been purchased by Ransel Coats, who has been employed by Dodge for the past six years.

Dodge, who resides with his wife and daughter, Mildred, at 150 Elwood street, has become in his seven years' residence here one of Redwood City's best known sportsmen. Last year he sponsored the Dodgers' team in the softball league. He is an active member of the local Eagles aerie No. 418, the Masonic lodge No. 168, and the Exchange club.

In preparation for remodeling of the building, Howard King is moving his repair shop to 2048 Broadway. C. D. Swett will maintain his insurance office in the present structure.

$4.50 Fare To Pescadero? Once Upon a Time

At one time it cost a traveler $4.50 for the round trip from Redwood City to the coastside community of Pescadero.

This bit of ancient county history was revealed today with receipt of a letter from H. J. Reinohl of Los Angeles to Secretary-Manager Roscoe D. Wyatt of the chamber of commerce here. Reinohl, collector of more than 100,000 different tickets from many parts of the world, recently was given a ticket issued by Knight's Stage Line.

From Wyatt he sought information as to the approximate date of issue.

The stage line operated during 1895-97, according to old timers, and was operated by the late Simon Knight, whose son, Walter Knight, former resident of Woodside, is still alive. He makes his home now in Taft.

San Carlos Boy, 4, Hit By Car, Hurt

Four-year-old Richard Davis suffered severe face cuts when struck down Saturday evening at 6 o'clock on Elm street, San Carlos, by an automobile owned by J. E. Ballou, 113 Colton avenue, San Carlos, and assertedly operated by Charles Rich, 16, son of Charles B. Rich, of 1823 Elm street, San Carlos.

S. P. Faces Suit For $23,000 Damages

The Southern Pacific Company today faced a damage suit of $23,000 filed here by Robert Farrell of Atherton, and his wife, Mrs. Hazel Farrell, who miraculously escaped death April 30 when Mrs. Farrell's automobile was struck by a fast train at the Peninsular avenue crossing in Burlingame.

Mrs. Farrell, sister-in-law of Irene Farrell, San Mateo deputy city clerk, was severely injured. She seeks $20,000. Farrell, who was not involved in the accident, asks the remainder for loss of his machine and other considerations. Atty. Fred A. Watkins of San Francisco represents the pair.

Citizenship Denied Man

Application for citizenship by J. Arthur Petersen, Redwood City printer and defeated candidate for third district supervisor, was denied here Tuesday during naturalization hearings in the superior court of Judge Maxwell McNutt.

Denial was made on the grounds that Petersens' actions in this country have been "unmoral," according to Court Clerk Homer A. Hargrave.

It was charged that Petersen at different times under oath had listed his birthplace as being in Utah, Wyoming and Denver, Col., while his citizenship application said he was a native of Denmark.

He also ran for public office without legal right, since he has admitted he was not a citizen.

On his naturalization application, Petersen assertedly answered "no" to the question whether or not he had been arrested while in this country. In court, however, Petersen admitted serving a jail term, Hargrave said.

The fact Peterson was not a citizen was first revealed when he filed papers for citizenship here March 5. This admission led his wife, Mrs. Lillian Petersen, to seek annulment of their marriage of October, 1931. The couple had been separated since 1932.

Petersen long had been a voter in San Mateo county. He told friends that he thought his five months' service in the United States Army in 1898 automatically made his a citizen.

He ran against Supervisor John Poole in the primaries last November, when seven other candidates also entered the race. Peterson polled enough votes to force Poole into a runoff election.

Fourteen applicants passed their examinations yesterday, while an additional 29 were expected to come up for hearing today.

The togas worn by men of ancient Rome were elliptical in shape and made of white wool. They were cleaned with pipe clay.

In 1877 Congress forgot to pass a military appropriation bill, and the army in order to carry on, had to purchase supplies on credit.

Stolen Car Found Wrecked Off Cliff

A stolen car, apparently disposed of by being driven over a 100-foot cliff near Salada Beach, was discovered by passing motorists Sunday, the highway patrol reported today.

It was registered to Carl L. Scott, San Francisco distributor, who had told San Francisco police of the loss on July 21. No clues as to the identity of the thieves had been found.

ECZEMA

SUFFERED 35 YEARS
IS ENTIRELY CURED

YEE & KO HERB CO.,

Dear Sirs: I want to thank you for curing my hands of eczema. After suffering for 35 years with cracked, bleeding hands and waking up in the night with terrible itching hands, it's no wonder I am thankful to you.

I have tried doctor after doctor, everything advertised for eczema in papers; in fact, I tried everything. And after the first three doses of your medicine I could see my hands get better. After about five weeks of your medicine, my hands are entirely well and haven't any sign of it coming back. Yours truly,

(Signed) MRS. M. BABCOCK,
Vaughn, Wash.

'Y' Boys Having 'Time of Lives'

Word received by Lawrence Gould, local Young Men's Christian Association secretary, from Jack Miller, one of the seven high school boys on a Y. M. C. A. tour covering an estimated 3500 miles, one of the most unique projects to be undertaken by the local group, reveals they are "having the time of their lives."

The boys, who were accompanied by Taylor Reedy, 'Y' executive of Palo Alto, and John Way, 'Y' Club leader, spent the first night of their journey, July 19, in Reno. There their first problem was encountered. After staying there about three hours those in the car with Miller drove on to Lovelock. John Way and those in his car had not shown up, however, so, thinking they might have had car trouble, Miller drove back to Reno. John was not to be found. Back to Lovelock they went, and there in an auto camp they found Way and companions — they had been ahead all the time — and food cooked by Jimmy Argo had been awaiting them for some time.

The following night about 11 o'clock, the travelers made Evantsville. "Found country road well shaded," Miller wrote. "We got water from a farm and fresh milk this morning. Crossed salt flats about 6 o'clock just as the sun was setting, and it looked swell. Stopped at a lake for a swim, and what a sensation! Just like a cork in water."

Thursday the group spent about three hours in Salt Lake City. There some of the boys went hunting, but they failed to make a catch.

Latest word from them revealed they had passed Grand Junction, Colo., and were headed for Mesa Verde National Park.

Making the trip besides those mentioned are Dwight Culver and Logan Potter of Redwood City and Linwood Ferrin, Fred Johnstone and Errol Longanecker of Palo Alto.

City May Buy Harrison Lot

Recommendation that fire restrictions along the west side of El Camino Real south of Charter street in Redwood City be removed, subject to certain conditions, will be made to the city council next Monday night, following action by the planning commission at a special meeting Monday.

The commission unanimously recommended that construction of frame buildings be allowed, provided that a four-foot space between structures and at the rear of lots be maintained. The action was taken with approval of City Manager C. L. Dimmitt.

Wooden construction is prohibited at the present time, since the area in question is classified as a business district.

A parcel of land 260 feet long between Harrison avenue and Redwood Creek will be suggested for city purchase, according to a second decision of the city planners.

The property, owned by John E. McCarthy, lies on Harrison between Duane and Clinton streets, but is too narrow for construction of houses, if set back lines are to be observed, it was pointed out.

Should the city buy the land, it would be maintained as a park strip along the road and creek, according to Dimmitt.

Application of the proprietors of the Nipa Hut on El Camino Real for building improvements was referred to Building Inspector I. C. Drathman.

Filling of the position of Commissioner John Layng's term, just expired, also will be up before the council Monday.

FACES DRIVING CHARGE

Frank M. White, 36, Palo Alto salesman, residing at 833 Forest avenue, was free on $50 bail today, following his arrest by highway patrolmen on charges of drunken driving. He was halted on the Bayshore highway between South San Francisco and Mills Field.

Drunkenness, some scientists say, is caused by loss of oxygen in the body.

"A wild cat oil well' is one which is drilled without much knowledge of what is under the ground.

Floyd Glennan, Sheriff Aide, Passes Away

The county courthouse flag flew at half mast this week in respect to the memory of Deputy Sheriff W. Floyd ("Pansy") Glennan, who passed away in a San Mateo hospital Monday night. He had been ill in the hospital for only a week, but had suffered for a long time from a stomach ailment.

He was a member of one of the oldest pioneer families in Redwood City. His father, the late Fredrick W. Glennan, a harnessmaker, was born in Redwood City, while his father came to California from England in the early days.

Deputy Sheriff Glennan lived with his wife, Florence T. Glennan, and two daughters, Alleen and Margaret Glennan, at 2000 San Carlos avenue, San Carlos.

Death came shortly after 9:30 o'clock.

OFFICE IN GLOOM

With receipt of the news this morning, the offices of Sheriff James J. McGrath were cast into gloom. The deputy sheriff had been jailer since 1931.

"Floyd was a fine man," the sheriff said. "He was big-hearted, kind and generous. He always tried to do something for someone else, and he was faithful."

He was born in Redwood City 46 years ago and had lived in San Mateo county all his life.

Before his association with the sheriff's office he was employed by the Dairy Delivery Company in San Mateo in an executive capacity. He also managed the old Moose Club in San Mateo for several years.

He ran for constable against the Burlingame incumbent, Ferguson Owen, in 1930, but lost out by a small margin.

Besides his wife and daughters, Deputy Sheriff Glennan is survived by his mother, Mrs. Mamie Glennan; his grandmother, Mrs. Mary E. Glennan, both of Redwood City, and two sisters, Mrs. Alleen McGuire, San Mateo, and Mrs. Ruth Price, Redwood City.

Port Rates Told To Nearby Shippers

Port Commissioners E. B. Hinman and Henry A. Beeger, City Manager C. L. Dimmitt and Port Manager Walter F. Murphy were to attend a luncheon meeting in San Jose today to discuss with Santa Clara county shippers shipping rates from the new Redwood City port.

The four Redwood City men were scheduled to meet at the St. Claire Hotel at noon with a group composed principally of traffic managers of the different canneries in the valley district. cich said.

Coast Farmers In Association

The organization of farmers and growers who have banded together by forming an association known as the Associated Farmers of San Francisco and San Mateo counties, a unit of Associated Farmers of California, Inc., included members of the Half Moon Bay region today as the result of a Saturday night meeting held in that community.

Principal speaker at the session, which was attended by approximately 100 farmers, was Henry Stroble of Salinas, president of the Associated Farmers of Monterey County. He discussed the necessity of farmers organizing to combat the peril of radicalism and to insure protection and harvesting of crops by working in close cooperation with legally constituted authorities such as the sheriff, district attorney, highway patrol and chiefs of police.

Representing Dist. Atty. Gilbert D. Ferrell's office, Asst. Daniel Sullivan spoke briefly, declaring that the best way to guard against trouble is through organization.

Sheriff James J. McGrath promised cooperation of his office, declaring that law and order would be maintained.

Inspt. Henry Livingston spoke on behalf of the highway patrol, reviewing conditions at last year's Salinas strike which the patrol entered in order to keep highways open.

A general discussion which followed resulted in many of the agriculturists joining the association, according to Don Goodcell, field secretary. Others are to be contacted later.

Goodcell hailed the meeting as another step in the movement "for all farmers to get together on a common basis." Similar meetings have been held in the Colma, Pescadero and East Palo Alto areas, all of which were represented at the coastside meeting, over which Supervisor Alvin S. Hatch presided.

Damage Suits Follow Two County Crashes

As result of an automobile accident May 25, Elsie B. Goodwin, 40, San Francisco, has filed suit here for $25,903.14 damages from W. T. Baer, 26, Salinas, asserted driver, and W. H. and I. R. Gilbert, named owners, of a truck that collided with her machine at the Bayshore and Bay Meadows intersection. Mrs. Goodwin is represented by George K. Ford, San Francisco attorney.

Another damage suit, requesting $20,150, was filed against Clarence A. Warning, who, Mrs. Bertha Gilman of Sonoma county alleges, was the driver of a machine that struck hers near Bloomfield, Sonoma county, July 3. Harry M. Gross, Oakland lawyer, represents Mrs. Gilman.

Official Mark Will Be Asked

Flying a 1000-kilometer course from Burbank to Palo Alto and back, Mrs. Jacqueline Cochrane Odlum, 23, flew the distance in a new racing plane late Monday in 3 hours, 2 minutes and 51 seconds. Her average speed was 203.89 miles per hour.

Mrs. Odlum said that while no official record now exists for a woman's flight over such a distance, she will request approval of her mark by the National Aeronautical Association and the Federation Aeronautique Internationale.

She will probably enter her ship, a four-place cabin with a single 600-horsepower engine, in the Bendix races in September, she said.

The plane took off shortly after 1:30 p.m. from the Union Air Terminal, then sped to Palo Alto, where it circled the pylon at the airport in the extreme south end of San Mateo county near the bay before heading south again. The ship is said to be capable of making up to 225 miles per hour.

Tom Penfield, of the Associated Air Services, was on hand at the airport to act as official clocker.

New rules drawn up for Ottawa County, Okla., jails require that prisoners "take a bath at least twice a week."

A. Massey "Matt" Berry, holder of the dominion's premier aviation honor, the McKee Trans-Canada Trophy.

Why Canada Calls MATT BERRY its Number 1 Birdman

Berry arrived over the marooned men in a howling gale that filled the air with blinding snow flurries. But he got down to the frozen bay and, despite its extremely rough ice, set his plane down safely.

Dispatched to aid men trapped in Arctic ice, this 49-year-old pilot battled gales and sub-zero winter, landed in fogs and took off in darkness, and performed one of the dominion's most thrilling rescues

By James Montagnes

MATT BERRY is Canada's new number one airman.

Here's one reason why:

A radio message arrived at Edmonton airport, relayed by way of Canadian government signal corps stations in the Northwest Territories, from a small mission schooner fast in the new ice somewhere off the Arctic coast. The message asked that a plane be sent to take three priests, two Eskimos and three Eskimo children from the Hornaday mission, nearly 2000 miles north, because they had run out of food.

Matt Berry was picked for the job. He left Edmonton Dec. 3. He arrived back Dec. 27, his job finished.

The first day the going was fair. He covered 430 miles. Going north, the daylight lasted only a few hours. The second day two hops brought him another 250 miles farther to Resolution on Great Slave Lake. He landed his big Junkers monoplane in the teeth of a gale out of the Arctic. The gale continued to gain in ferocity. Berry was forced to wait at Resolution.

Dec. 5 was a beautiful clear day, his log shows. In all he flew 560 miles, landing nicely at the end of the short sub-Arctic day at Norman, just below the Arctic Circle. The weather was becoming colder, and when he warmed up his engine for the next hop to Fort Good Hope, the sun of the previous day had gone. Instead a low fog from the Arctic Ocean had crept south.

But Berry was used to this sort of weather, and he was in a hurry. He made the 162 miles against a prevailing headwind, and found the fog lower than ever as he came to where his speedometer showed him should be Good Hope. He knew his area blindfolded, made for the runway on the Mackenzie River ice, missed it, and climbed again. Two more attempts, with similar results.

HIS log says, "had to give it up as it was too dangerous." He then landed on the south side of a nearby island in the wide river. Using his plane as a snowmobile, he then brought it up to the regular landing place at the settlement. His thermometer read 40 below zero out there on the windswept frozen river.

The next hop was started in even worse fog, and the fog did not let up past Arctic Red River, while at Aklavik, 316 miles from his previous day's stop, he found it so heavy he had to climb higher over it and could not land.

Through holes in the fog which showed up from time to time, he saw open water at his regular landing base, another danger for his ski-equipped ship. Circling about, with the aid of radio from the signal corps station at this Arctic metropolis, he finally found a landing spot, solidly frozen.

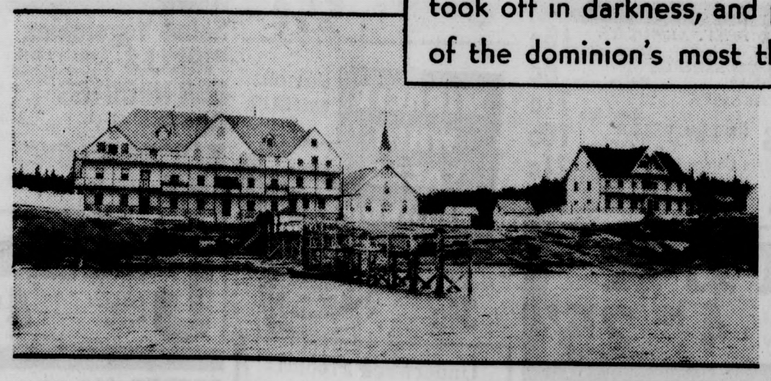
At Aklavik they told him the details.

Bearded Bishop Pierre Falaize had left Coppermine in the center of Canada's Arctic coast for Aklavik. They had started too late in the mission schooner Our Lady of Lourdes and had been frozen in half way, at the mouth of the Hornaday River, near Letty Harbour. The bishop and his companions had driven with their sleds and dogs from the frozen-in boat to an outpost mission along the Hornaday River. Here they had hoped to spend part of the winter, till they had enough food on their sleighs to take them overland to Aklavik.

The previous winter the priests of the mission had cached a year's supply of frozen fish for dog food. The supply steamer was to have left food for the men last summer. When the bishop arrived at the mission, bears had cleaned out the cache of dog food, the supplies had not arrived. The party had come 75 miles inland. They were without any food, and the nearest post was Letty Harbour, 60 miles away across the frozen wastes.

While two of the priests went to Letty Harbour, the bishop and his Eskimos set fishnets through holes in the ice of a lake 35 miles distant, brought coal from a small outcropping which they had worked before. 25 miles farther. For weeks they lived this way, just getting enough food to keep dogs and humans alive. Letty Harbour's food supply, they learned, was low also. Then the bishop had tramped back to his schooner, sent his radio appeal for aid.

Eskimo children like those Berry rescued from the frozen-in schooner.



The mission church and Indian school at Chipewyan. Berry once took off from here to find a doctor "somewhere within 500 miles" for a sick woman. He found him.

FROM Aklavik Berry made one hop of 350 miles, with only the Northern Lights for illumination, to the Hornaday mission post. He could not see where the coast ended and the ocean ice began. Only when he flew low enough the cracks in the moving ice field told him he was over the water.

From the south came a gale, blowing so hard, swirling the fine snow so high, that he could not make out the markings of coal bags which the priests had laid out for his guidance. But he got down to the frozen bay, and despite its extremely rough ice set his rescue plane down without cracking up a ski.

Having given the starved priest and Eskimos the food he had brought them, he next day flew to Letty Harbour, there took on some supplies, two of the priests, flew back to the mission. The daylight was now so short that he could not take off for Aklavik.

For four days he was forced to stay at the mission, while a blizzard raged and kept him out with his plane to see it was not blown away. On Dec. 14 he thought the storm had died down enough to get through. With the bishop, the Eskimos and the Eskimo children, he started for Aklavik.

It was now near the longest night of the year, and at the mission the daylight was a matter of minutes. It was so dark, in fact, that Berry states in his log that he could not read the instruments in front of him. His engineer had to hold a flashlight over them.

Then it became still darker, and with the wind still strong, the plane over the icefields, Berry considered it best to turn back. Forty-five minutes after starting he was back at the mission, and there he and his passengers remained another five days.

Dec. 19, with the thermometer still away below zero, he made another try. For most of the two hours they were in the air the weather was clear, but the sky was almost dark. Then they struck fogs, and two hours and fifteen minutes after starting, having come 225 miles, Berry set his plane down on an unmapped small lake. Visibility was zero, "light terrible," temperature 28 below zero.

It was 40 below zero when they woke up after a cramped sleep in the plane. The day was clear, but dark. They warmed up the engine with their portable oil stove, took off for the 200 mile trip.

Berry, who knows that country well, lost his way, missed his landmarks, had to rely on his compass—in a country where a compass is practically useless, since the Magnetic North Pole is nearby. But with some arithmetic, and allowing for the proximity of the Pole, he arrived at Aklavik, and found it 50 below zero there.

LEAVING the Eskimos, and taking on a load of passengers, the bishop, a mother with her 2-month-old son, a husband and his wife, all white, he flew through 60 below zero practically without incident to Newbrook, 80 miles from Edmonton.

On one of his stops—the trip took five days—he sighted a stranded plane. He went back to the nearest post, dropped his load of passengers, returned to the stranded plane, found it had a disabled engine, and took the pilot and engineer back to the post to await a new engine. Then, with his passengers once more aboard, he was off for the south.

Outside Newbrook visibility became so poor in a blinding blizzard, with snow swirling 1000 feet in the air, that he had to go back. Making a landing on a plowed field, after flying all these weeks he cracked up one ski pedestal. That night Berry and his mechanic made a temporary pedestal, and next morning landed at Edmonton, the rescued bishop safely delivered.

That is one reason why this 49-year-old pilot with slightly graying hair was picked by the Canadian Minister of Defense, Honorable Ian Mackenzie, to be awarded Canada's premier aviation prize, the McKee Trans-Canada Trophy. It goes annually to the man who is considered by a government committee to have done most for Canadian aviation in the year just past. J. Dalziel McKee in 1926 made the first trans-Canada flight in a seaplane, from Halifax to Vancouver. He donated the trophy shortly before he died in a crash.

Berry has been flying in the Canadian northland since 1928, and knows that country as you know your home. That was why he was picked to go find Bishop Falaize. That is also why he found two Royal Canadian Air Force flyers a few months earlier, after 40 other Canadian airmen, air force and commercial, had tried to find them for over three weeks.

BERRY has a specialty. He can fly a plane beautifully with a canoe tied under each wing and a motorboat under the cabin. So when an order came to Edmonton from the search base at Fort Reliance on the east point of Great Slave Lake for an extra pair of floats for a plane, Berry tied them under the wings of his plane, and was off on his 800-mile trip.

It was just before freeze-up towards the middle of September, with plenty of rain. The extra floats under his wings kept him to a slow speed of 75 miles per hour, but he arrived intact. They told him how they had searched for the two airmen, who had only a week's emergency food supply aboard. The country had been fine-combed on courses plotted on photographic maps.

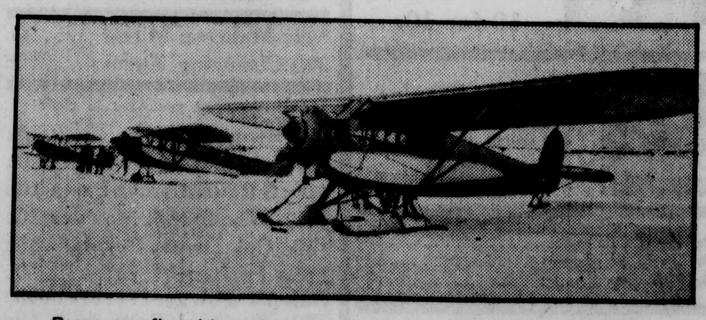
Then Berry had a hunch. He and Marlowe Kennedy started out in two planes. They hit north, scanning the ground below with powerful field glasses.

They came across two trappers. They had heard a plane on Aug. 17, the day the two airmen had been due back at their base. On went Berry and his companion. The field glasses sighted an oil drum floating on a small river. Down went the ships.

The drum had a note tied to it. It was from the two lost flyers, had been dropped when they had but one hour's gas left. They had gone off their course because their compass was useless; they were practically due south of the Magnetic Pole.

Four days Berry searched for those two flyers. Then he sighted them, signaled his companion plane to come down, and there they found an air force plane in good condition. In the brush nearby they found two cleanly shaved though nearly starved airmen, Flight Lieutenant Sheldon Coleman and Aircraftsman J. Fortey.

After their emergency ration had gone, they had eaten berries and two squirrels. They had been lost 31 days. For three weeks they had kept smoke signals going, then they had become too weak. They had sighted other rescue planes flying over them which had failed to see their ship. Berry brought them to Reliance. (Parliament learned later the search had used up 14,000 gallons of gasoline, and had cost $52,384.)



Berry can fly with canoes or motorboats strapped to his plane. Here are two planes he strapped up with floats for summer flying, leaving for the far north.

On another occasion shortly after he had won his spurs in the north, he landed after a hard freighting trip at Chipewyan, on Lake Athabasca. It was in June, with nearly 20 hours of daylight at this northern Alberta post. The post factor told him a sick woman needed a doctor badly. The district doctor was somewhere within 500 miles of the post. Would Berry go find him?

And with only those instructions Matt started out, stopped at posts and mining camps. On his fourth stop he found the doctor, bundled him and his interpreter in the plane, and took him back to Chipewyan. It was a 491 mile trip, according to the logbook.

Ground Broken For Title Office

Following letting of contracts for $27,500 development, ground was broken Monday for the California Pacific Title & Trust Company's new addition to its present office at 2303 Broadway.

The new structure, of the same architectural style as the present 14-year-old building, will be on Hamilton street just in the rear of the existing office, and will be 40x50 feet in size.

The general contract was let to G. W. Williams Company for $24,232. The electrical work, to be done by Dingman's Electrical Service; linoleums, vault doors, shades and other phases of the improvement will run the cost to the estimated figure, according to Manager T. J. Hallinan.

In the new section of the office will be a 22x50-foot vault, making total vault space in the office 78x22 feet, largest in the county, Hallinan said. In this vault, which will be 26 feet high, will be kept the firm's records, believed to be the most complete in the county, and containing duplicates of all records in the courthouse affecting real estate. With the new vault, which would be able to withstand heat for at least six hours, the firm could supply copies of all county records should they be destroyed by fire, Hallinan said, recalling that in the 1906 fire in San Francisco, the California Pacific's records were the only complete ones of the city to be salvaged. They were saved although the title firm's building burned, Hallinan said.

In addition to the vault, the rest of the new addition, which will have two floors, will contain rest rooms, a kitchenette and a private office.

The expansion, made to "keep pace with the development of San Mateo county," will embrace also redecoration of the interior of the present office, installation of a $3800 air conditioning system, soundproofing of all walls, recovering of floors, and improving of lighting conditions, "to give our 30 employes the best conditions possible under which to work," Hallinan declared.

The complete job, on which local labor and materials are to be used as far as possible, under terms of the contracts, is to be completed within 85 working days.

Crabs Endanger Bayshore Road, Engineer Says

Wooden supports at one section of the Bayshore highway are being eaten by crabs and will crumble eventually to create a hazardous condition for motorists.

That is the opinion of Carl C. Pittard, Three Cities Mosquito Abatement District superintendent.

The flood outlet under the highway east of the Millbrae dairy is the vulnerable spot, where, according to Pittard, a similar condition happened four or five years ago.

Twenty-five yards of fill were found necessary then as the crabs, which find concrete indigestible, worked their way through the wooden piling at either side of the outlet, allowing water to rush in and wash away the road.

Concrete in place of the present wood is the only remedy suggested by Pittard. Unless the substitution is made, he claims, possible loss of life may result from the highway falling through.

Exchangites Elect 3 Board Members

The Redwood City Exchange Club, at its regular meeting Tuesday night at which several brief talks by members were heard, elected W. W. Hendricks, W. H. Doxsee and Al Davies to its board of control. Others on the board besides officers of the club are A. L. Robertson, K. B. Towne and Emil Steinegger.

The club also decided to accept a challenge of the local Lions club to a softball game, to be played in September.

Speakers at the session included Kenneth Van Gundy, discussing the Harbor Opening Festival Queen Contest; Kenneth L. Bowen, discussing the Associated Press teletype machines recently installed in The Tribune office; Edmund Scott, Dr. William B. Langston and Wilbur H. Doxsee on vacations, and Dr. Rollo La Berge on the coming national convention to be held at Tampa, Fla. Francis Tinney was chairman. C. L. Stokes, president, presided.

ENGINEER BUREAU ALLOTS FUNDS TO REPAIR ROADS DURING YEAR

County Engineer U. S. Marshall's proposed road budget, contemplating the expenditure of $302,339 in gasoline tax funds during the coming fiscal year, provides for maintenance and repair work on virtually all the county's roads, in addition to the new projects, total value of which is to be $115,714. Of the new projects' costs, however, it is expected $49,714 will be received from the federal government.

Some of the larger maintenance projects listed by Marshall for the year are the following:

Redwood City-San Gregorio road from the Skyline boulevard to San Gregorio, 15.54 miles, $12,150; La Honda-Pescadero road, 13.97 miles, $20,100; Santa Cruz-Alpine road between Menlo Park and route No. 35, 20.51 miles, $5000; Kings Mountain-Tunitas road from Woodside to the coast highway, 15.15 miles, $10,000; Higgins-Purissima roads from the coast highway to the Skyline, $5000; Emerald Lake district roads, $5000; North Fair Oaks district roads, $8000; Las Lomitas district, west of Menlo Park, $3060.

The new projects proposed by Engineer Marshall include two bridges over Pescadero Creek, to cost an estimated $50,681; reconstruction of .9 of a mile of the La Honda road, $35,033, and the rebuilding of the road from the Bayshore highway to the Redwood City Harbor, $30,000.

In Marshall's budget, $18,870 is allowed for administration salaries and wages, $87,906 for per diem roads and highway wages; $2400 for administration maintenance and operation; $400 for administration capital outlay; $59,805 for materials, repairs, tools, etc.; $15,269 for capital outlay for equipment; $4000 for per diem wages on bridges, with of LaFayette, Ind., is naval attache. tures; $17,000 wages on work relief projects, with $8000 for maintenance and operation under this head.

All Buddhist monks and nuns in China are receiving first aid and wartime relief instruction. In Hankow the monks have organized an ambulance corps.

Gas Station Burglar Given Year in Jail

One year in jail was the sentence given Monday by Judge A. R. Cotton to Rene Marier, San Mateo youth who pleaded guilty to breaking into a San Mateo service station on June 26 and walking away with $32.95. He will spend the remaining 11 months in the county jail, having already served one month pending disposition of his case. He was represented by Atty. P. W. Jackson, Burlingame.

Theatre Faces Suit Over Patron's Fall

A damage suit for $15,789.25 was filed here against the Peninsula Theatre in Burlingame and the owners, the Peninsula Theatres, Inc.

Mrs. Bettie Rascoe, widow residing at 1511 Carol avenue, Burlingame, alleged that because of "improper lighting" she fell on the evening of last March 9, while walking to her seat in the loge section, and incurred a "fractured wrist, bruises, discoloration of her legs and shock." The plaintiff is represented by R. A. Rogers, San Francisco attorney.
